The first mention of Calvary church upon the journal of our convention occurs in 1834, in connection with Mr. Wright, as rector, as well as rector of the church at Randolph and Messrs. Gaines Ramblet and Ruffin Smith were lay delegates from Calvary. Mr. Wright, we think, was the first Episcopai minister who held a regular service in Memphis, but the place and date we have not been able to ascertain. At this time the parish numbered only five communicants. In 1884 Bishop Otey visited Memphis and preached several times. There was then a small building in Court Square belonging to the city, and in which a school was being kept by the late Eugene Magevney, Esq. Upon application to this gentle-man for the use of the building in which divine service might be held, he not only gave his consent, but had it warmed and otherwise prepared. It was in this unpretending building that the first bishop of Tennessee made his first effort to preach the gospel in Memphis. Upon his second visit he preached in an upper room of the old markethouse, known as the Town hall, Finding t inconvenient and uncomfortable, the bishop gladly accepted the tender of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches, in both of which he preached, in the latter to a large congregation, and confirmed three persons. In 1834 he again visited Memphis, but owing to its excited condition on account of the presence of a great number of Indians on their way to the west, the people were not much disposed to attend his ministrations. He, however, gatherer' a small congregation, to whom he delivered the word of truth. Upon this occasion he baptized the four children of John and Louisa Pope, two children of George and Elizabeth Holmes, and a child of James and Ann Hart, these being the first baptisms in Calvary parish by the bishop. The little flock sustained a great loss by the death of their rector, Rev. Dr. Wright, which event occurred on the twenty-seventh day of April, 1835. This gentleman was originally from South Carolina, and came to Tennessee some years before his settlement in Memphis. He was a man of much worth, and deeply interested in the prosperity of the church. After the death of this gentleman the parish remained vacant, during which it was in ber of communicants reported to the convention, only three remained. No vestry had been elected during the vacancy. Even the occasional visits of the bishop, and the casual services of some passing clergyman, made less impression than other more faverable circumstances might have been expected, as in addition to the want of organization there was no church or other suitable room or place open to them for worship in which their own numbers or 'influence could become known to themselves. In this state of James H. Otey was duly elected bishop things many had become discouraged, and a lot upon Second street, opposite to the Baptist church, was bought and
